morning talk echoes throughout the halls as people in the band area flash to their lockers before heading for homeroom.

ah! rock and roll! aspect upon aspect of students' lives extend far beyond walls of lee, and yet we're all here together.

the grateful dead and the allman brothers pull in myriads of rock and rollers to d.c. as the first two day concert rages in the area.

"s" stands for sportsmanship. "s" stands for spirit. "s" stands for stamina. "s" stands for superior. "s" stands for staunton.

new year brings readjustments

brand new doors welcomed 1046 students to lee. outside, 58 gallons of paint gleamed on the freshly painted "smoking lounge." inside, reflecting floors shone in the crammed hallways. searching their maps, new arrivals explored the maze. trying to readjust to school days was next to impossible as temperatures reached peaks of 99 and lee became a smoldering oven. despite the ever-pressing problems, laughter pealed throughout the school. gradually, the weather stabilized, and students trudged on.

swarming toward the stage, rock fans of various sorts team with enthusiasm as the concert atmosphere sends them off together.

starting like a speedometer, sophomores gradually break into the routine losing the newness but adding a vital element to lee.

after waiting months for the letters for the school sign, the class of '73 found that their gift had been in vain as it was destroyed a few weeks later.

finding out the hard way, a vsdb wrestler learns that you can't underestimate the wily ways of a determined lee grappler.

seconds seemed like hours for students standing outside, half expecting to see the roof blown off during the march bomb scare.

"there ain't nothin' to worry about man". lewis venable exhibits confidence in his academic ability to mrs. pat gantt, senior english teacher.

late nights and physic-filled days plague the last week before grades come out as senior patty yancey races to finish her ten jobs.

spare time presents no problems to lee students

blowing a horn in the marching band, pounding the field at football practice, setting off smoke bombs, or just waiting for the bell to ring, lee students killed spare time in a rainbow of ways. exploring the branches of the "learning tree," students stemmed off into the various areas of school life. rock and roll. soul. classical. choir. football. art work. drama. business. phys. ed. shop. cosmetology. scholarship. each in a different "category" and each a shining piece of glass.

studying other "things" besides a lapful of notes is more thought provoking to sophomore rodney freemen while waiting for the bell.

entering the "church" at the beginning of the marriage ceremony, brenda cassidy plays bridesmaid realistically for the occasion.

"oh come on, don't you believe me?" protests keith bosserman as he tries to convince mrs. becky harvill of his seniority at the senior party.

gypsy hill is a haven to young, old

the leaves turn green in gypsy hill park before they turn anywhere else — or so it seems. walking, playing tennis, or baseball, swimming, swinging, feeding the animals, strolling through the fine arts center, riding the train, or meeting friends, it's all there. the park has traditionally been a haven for high school kids. free concerts and art shows spiced student activities and social life peaked as everyone came together to enjoy the facilities.

warm spring weather has appeared at last, and many couples spend their extra time during lunch or between classes relaxing outside.

a stone's throw from lee, gypsy hill offers parking space, an after school hang out area, and picnic tables to sneak off to at lunch.

galloping across the stage as a prissy flirt, june carter joins in the 4th of july festivities at the staunton memorial stadium.

fads take form in clothes and johnny cash

blue jeans, army shirts, halters, smocks, clogs, platform shoes, and peasant dresses. the styles and the fads varied as the people did. the dress reflected the personalities — all different. if there was a school-wide fad it was "dress to be yourself."

country music fans had a hey day on july 4. the appearance of johnny cash drew swarms of spectators to the park. the statler brothers, june carter, and the king of country music roused the crowd to singing, dancing, and applause. since the city is home to two of the statler brothers, the grounds were filled with personal friends and acquaintances.

partners in life as well as on stage, June Carter and Johnny Cash honor Stauntonians by their presence at Happy Birthday U.S.A.

varsity victory adds to spirit of homecoming

Tears and happiness combined to set the mood for homecoming night when the fighting leemen were victorious over jefferson of roanoke. excited as they were, the homecoming court candidates strolled gracefully across the field at halftime. clinched hands and crossed fingers waited for that golden moment when ginger rowe was chosen 1973 homecoming queen. bouquets of flowers were delivered by the court jesters to the court. sophomore representative dee flavin escorted by scott dekle, junior representative, donna alexander escorted by bob grover, and senior representatives, cindy cuculic escorted by jeff kirtz, and evelyn ware, escorted by john stuart. the queen, escorted by eddie bailes received the traditional red roses. later, we, "knights in white satin," jousted over to our own little castle and ruled throughout until 1 a.m. where the royal court and its subjects were entertained by the sounds of barnstorm.

just crowned by mr.charles kurtz,ginger rowe smiles at a gift of roses during homecoming activities as escort eddie bailes looks on.

cake cutting "newlyweds" rodney williams and susan collins receive some advice from mrs. dorothy wood while performing the custom.

at last it is done, happily the groom slides the ring on with ease at the climax of the "wedding" while the "minister" reads on.

pledging himself "to love, honor, and obey," rodney williams can't help his smiles at the solemnity of such a happy "occasion."

standing in line for the congratulations, "bride and groom" trade jokes, handshakes, and an occasional kiss with "well-wishers."

mock wedding helps girls with future

Wedding bells were ringing along with tempting smells of the traditional tier cake.

under the guidance of mrs. dorothy wood, the home ec. girls planned and presented a mock wedding and reception. two weeks of careful planning were dedicated to make the wedding a success.

participants to be in the wedding were selected from study hall and then surveyed to determine who got the parts. rodney williams was united in matrimony with his bride, susan collins.

seniors await graduation with open arms

the passage of time lived in the minds of seniors as their last year slowly burnt out. special privileges were awarded at last to the class that thought they would never make it. as the days of may sped by, though, caps and gowns were measured and time began to fly. graduation announcements were mailed to all parts of the country. last minute extra credit work was breathlessly scrawled on paper as seniors prayed for exam exemption. at last it was over. at 9:30 p.m. on the ninth of june, over 340 caps shot to the ceiling of the john lewis gym and the tears began to flow.

like knights around a rectangular table planning a battle strategy, seniors hear out their chieftain, alias mrs. rebecca harvill.

caught in the act, leeway photographers find area residents turning out to vote, really taking their privilege seriously.

pledging himself to a people, governor elect mills godwin reflects the concerned face of leadership in conflicting times.

staunton looks to lee's mock election

Predicting the outcome of virginia's gubernatorial election, lee's mock election was closely analyzed by the people of staunton. mills e. godwin got the governor's spot, dalton carried the votes for lieutenant governor, and miller was elected attorney general. the republican ticket captured the vote in actuality. government students held an interest in the election while some polled students concluded that it was "an unusual way to miss some of class."

campaigning to the very last minute along with many undecided voters was all a part of the '73 election for governor and local officials.

capturing his audience with a sparkle of enthusiasm, poet max ellison recites a favorite, "ze skunk" on his annual fall visit to lee.

pouring every ounce of emotional feeling into his poetry, max ellison captivates students and flings them into another world.

inspiring his audiences with positive aspects of today's youth, speaker-artist sketch erickson encourages lee students to be themselves.

assemblies present poets, artists, debaters to students

debating against compulsory education, paul edwards exhibits his ability to thoroughly research a topic and present it to his audience.

Students were treated to an oration by poet max ellison on his third consecutive trip to the staunton area. two of the most popular of his poems "the star-bellied sneeches" and "ze skunk" both won loud student approval.

in an assembly aimed at introducing students to the debate team, paul edwards, billy moran, scotty scott, and charles foster debated the issues of weekly religious education and compulsory education. both the negative and the affirmative teams scored a victory, and the session ended in a draw.

warning students of the pitfalls of following the codes of morality as presented by the media was sketch erickson. a formal commercial artist, he sacrificed his job in order to give talks nation-wide about youth and their morality.

"hey babes wat-cha doin' friday night?" denise shipman is amused by crystal gardener's last ditch attempts to get a date for the hop.

leading the march through mcdonald's sherry ramsey creates an uproar as lee students swarm to greenville avenue's up dated malt shop.

surrounded from all sides by pony-tailed and red lipsticked bobby-sockers, coach don wilson seems to be enjoying lee's first 50's day.

taking a time out from class studies, ginger rowe, paul ziccardy, and fred faught pose in their appropriate style of the 50's.

students bring back white socks, grease

Calf-length skirts, pony tails, bobby socks, leather jackets, and greasy hair incited fun and laughter throughout lee's chaotic 50's day. the project originated in the pep club through an effort to promote girls' basketball. to surge imagination and participation, prizes were offered to contest winners. jayne holston captured the senior prize. in the junior class, paul ziccardy was decidedly the greasiest. mary hasset was the sophomores' most realistic bopper. talk of the malt shop and overwhelming participation prompted mrs. jo meeks, pep club advisor, to term the day "a success".

showing students that he remembers life in the 50's, senior david yeago exhibits his nostalgia by donning a bow tie and letter sweater.

really into the mood of 50's day, robbie atkins stops at the burger stand on the strip. only the place is mcdonald's — no curb service.

"man you better stay off my turf!" eddie bailes with hair slicked and white socks donned dedicates one day to the 50's to help promote spirit.

the bunny kid rises again at gypsy hill park in the form of á beverly manor student enjoying the excitement and discovery of the "big egg."

camouflaged easter eggs cover the park as busy bunnies continue to stash them here, there, and everywhere in the band stand area.

eyes turned toward the classroom clocks as the minutes ticked slowly by on april 11. at last six weeks tests were over and easter vacation was begun. the activities were as varied as the students. hiding eggs, sleeping late, catching up on school work, getting stoned, or visiting relatives, the break was appreciated. easter vacation marked the beginning of the last six weeks — a dream of lazy summer days soon to come.

leading the fight for a cleaner earth at lee, the environmental committee shows the ways things are naturally at reed's gap.

alliterating every overlook seems to be a catchy way of attracting attention from tourists on the blue ridge parkway.

summit magic bewitches valley folk

Twenty miles from the city limits, nature rises and falls over the ridges and through the hollows of the blue ridge mountains. scenic over-looks lay open miles of the valley by day and the bright lights of waynesboro by night. crystal mountain streams plummet downward over smooth, slick rocks and form reflective pools that are warmed by the sun. in late january, the announcement was made that the blue ridge parkway would be closed until march 15 "due to the energy crisis." the problem was overcome, however, by driving up the back road and bicycling on the parkway.

"20 minute cliff" serves as a timepiece for the folk below. in june and july the sun sets 20 minutes after it hits the rock face.

television hovering over them, two mountain residents sit and talk about the old wood saw that has "always been a good one."

the blue ridge mountains shelter the shenandoah valley, but social changes have wound down the trails and infiltrated staunton.

faculty defeat students in annual match

for the first time in lee's history, the women were able to overcome the students in the annual student-faculty game. led by mrs. peggy o'dell and mrs. terry boyle, the teachers kept a slight lead throughout the game. trying their best to come back were anne carr, sue batt, pam barrett, and carolyn hamrick, but when the last second ticked off, the score showed a 35-25 win for the women. in the second game of the night, the students had another defeat as the men won with a 68-63 score. students don lemon, wilbur johnson, and jon giesen fought the likes of coach paul hatcher, delmer botkin, and coach bob walton, only to come up short at the end of the game.

sticky fingers won't come off for mr. wes meeteer as he gets yanked over the shoulders of a determined student.

waiting impatiently for the rebound, carolyn hamrick, mrs. diane mace, and mary beth mackay stretch their muscles in an all out effort.

slowly rippling through winter stranged land, a natural spring gyrates out its life blood, exposing naked ribs to icy winter air.

blanketing the area with the first snowfall of the year, lee students find something besides books to plod through.

winter arrives in valley as snow and icy winds

Boughs creaked as icy winds ushered winter into the valley. christmas vacation was suddenly three days longer. a blanket of snow and ice muffled the area and paralyzed much of the traffic. no christmas programs were presented.

the energy crisis called for a lowering of thermostats. students scurried through the cold hallways to enter somewhat warmer rooms. d.s.t. went into effect january 6. schools started fifteen minutes later and schedules were shifted and shuffled to fit after school jobs.

exams force cramming, but soon pass

On returning from christmas vacation, students' minds and nerves turned toward january 16, 17, and 18. notes were dug up, nails were bitten, and hair was twisted. yawns and moans escaped during review days. bearing a two-exam-a-day load, writers' cramp set in and crammage of the brain stopped many night time follies. finally, exams were over for first semester. except for seniors with a 90 or above average, the process was repeated in june and rewarded with a three month vacation.

consoling himself with the thought that there's only three more days of school to go, robbie herr prepares for three long exam days.

curling hair with the correct style, peggy bibb attempts to perfect bonita dedrick's appearance as part of her cosmetology examination.

"boy, did i mess that one up!" teresa white seems to be a bit dismayed after studying all night only to find out that she goofed up her exam.

frustrating, nervewrecking, and cramping mary mckay, joe warner, and anita pilson learn the value of patience.

various goals encourage students to find summer jobs

Changing tires, selling ladies' lingerie, slinging hamburgers, or working construction, the race to grab a buck went on at full pace. students earned money in full and part time jobs for a rainbow of reasons — car payments and new clothes, concerts and dates with that special girl, albums, tapes, and stereos. a variety of purposes and occupations to fit a variety of people.

housewares of all types are available at montgomery ward. make an effort to see kathy garris. she'll be happy to assist you.

pharmaceutical products are top priority with cashier clarence durette. he strives to please his customers at medco.

hardhat dicky hamrick knows that construction work can be very grueling at times but today he catches a break and plays flagman.

inventory time can be a real chore but lois kidd seems to have little difficulty in the ladies' department at montgomery ward.

keeping the ladies' cosmetic counter in order can be a real hassle but debbie bell enjoys the challenge at woolworths.

poking around and having a good time, the teachers prove that they do have talent, as they twist and dance about in the annual talent show.

showing her more serious side, junior carolyn hamrick takes time out from j.v. cheerleading to perform two songs in the talent show.

trying to convince hillbilly pam rexrode to hand over her moonshine is harder than expected for kim wagner in "two drips and a drop."

"the old soft-shoe" was performed in lee's talent show by cindy doyle, bev smith, and robert price who accompanied the act with his singing.

"The way we were" brought back many fond memories to the old folk and the students at lee high. the annual talent show, held march 29th and 30th proved to be a success, demonstrating that l.h.s. students were more than just book-worms. m.c.'s that added to the entertainment were ginger rowe, sherry ramsey, and david yeago. vaudeville existed, carried out by a variety of acts and comedy. "virginia bear" consisting of lester bowers, jerry warner, mike brooks, and david pelny, was among the top attractions. others included mr. ernie holley singing "a time for us" and haze green along with cheryl manspile doing a very graceful ballet. behind the scenes doing the more strenuous jobs were the make-up crew, the stage crew, the lightings, and the student directors, chrys gardner, angie rexrode, and martha mizzi. mrs. virginia martin was faculty advisor for the event.

'the way we were' exhibits school talent

spring encourages outdoor activities

Spring tornadoes marked the start of warm weather in the valley as days of rain encouraged buds to open. several students began to count the days until the start of easter vacation when they would depart for switzerland. others submitted to spring fever and spent long days sleeping in class. the prom was frantically planned as juniors sweated to find the money to sponsor it. tennis players and back packers threw off their winter shackles and headed for the great outdoors. seniors timidly and happily were fitted for caps and gowns, juniors received their coveted class rings, and sophomores were content just to get out of school for three months.

ominous signs of the last winter days roll out with the clouds as springtime approaches around the corner to hopefully brighten things up.

sometimes with the advent of spring, we take the coming of summer for granted until old man winter reappears.

trudging off to the beginning of another spring school day, frances simmons, kim miller, and angie rexrode don't seem to mind too strongly.

relishing the timely spring weather, seniors margaret hedberg and lester bowers take a moment to seize some tranquility and reflection.

"listen, bud, no one messes with my well tuned machine." auto enthusiast bob conley assures ace mechanic pete kinsella they have the formula.

constructing a stairway to heaven, juniors discuss the results of their efforts to convert the armory into a maze of stars and moon dust.

dazzling foiled stars and star studded crepe paper adorn the armory ceiling to create an ethereal atmosphere for the senior prom.

creating the heavens is no easy task but karl lawhorn and ritchie mcdonough can manage easily with a ladder, tape, and crepe paper.

carpets of stars are unrolled and taped together by tammy atkins to become a sparkling milky way like backdrop for the senior prom.

"now where?" asks jane harman. the armory still looks sparse but soon the cinderblock edifice will become a heavenly stairway to heaven.

under a collage of colors, the vacant ladders rest peacefully while the prom decorating committee takes a temporary break.

assembling the star-filled heavens, tammy atkins creates the celestial illusion for heavenly couples to walk among the stars.

camouflaging the armory, reese jones and terry arey make constant use of the step ladder during the numerous hours of decorating.

juniors work hard to prepare the armory

blue and white, starred crepe paper strewn about the armory was one of the many tasks of the juniors to decorate for the 1974 junior-senior prom. not only did the crepe paper add to the heavenly effect, but so did the stars, clouds, and even a moon.

music poured out from the armory during the days of decorating, but it wasn't all fun. the juniors worked diligently in erecting the grand staircase leading up to the starry heaven creating the theme — "stairway to heaven." hands grew tired from cutting out cardboard stars, wrapping the moon in foil, and twisting crepe paper. gathering of freshly picked flowers and putting snacks on the tables were part of the last minute preparations. the armory was now ready for a magical night.

"stairway to heaven" is theme of prom

attired in the best of taste, the ladies and gentlemen of the junior-senior prom danced the night away to the music of "chess." long dresses swirled and tuxedos glistened throughout the floor of the national guard armory. stars and streamers of blue and white complimented the theme, "stairway to heaven." punch along with many other tempting appetizers flowed deliciously from the refreshment table. taking professional pictures of prom couples was mr. bob tavenner who gave his time to please many girls as well as their handsome dates. presiding over the prom court were cindy coffey, queen and eddie bailes, king. this was but one of the summer time activities in which lee students enjoyed in the well deserved three months summer vacation.

king and queen of the senior prom, eddie bailes and cindy coffey dance to the heavenly theme song, "stairway to heaven."

"starlight, star bright, first star i see tonight . . ." seniors wish that this star-filled night of fun and fantasy will never end.

divine couples dance under the star adorned night as the sounds of "chess" reverberate throughout the heaven like armory.

hoping for a dead ringer, assistant principal mr. delmer botkin demonstrates his ability at pitching horseshoes.

form and concentration are imperative when playing horseshoes, but mark knopp has the know-how to make that all important ringer.

arriving early for the senior picnic at hoy's farm, frances simmons and robbie atkins are prepared for a fun-filled day.

sports of all varieties are available to seniors at the senior picnic. football is particularly popular with bruce craun.

fond memories will linger in the minds of these seniors as they enjoy their last activity together as a class before graduation.

senior picnic is last informal meeting of seniors

In lieu of the senior banquet, a picnic was held at hoy's farm on june 8th from 3:00 p.m. till. swimming, boating, pitching horseshoes, throwing a frisby, or most of all, eating marked this fun-filled event. casually dressed seniors spent one last day together of fun and frolic before heading down their own separate paths upon graduation.

superintendent mr. thomas c. mcswain awards eddie bailes with the coveted joe ast award during the graduation exercises.

graduating seniors gaze solemnly at their graduation programs before awaiting the final roll call into a world of uncertainty.

282 seniors graduate on june 9, 1974

Temperature reached high in the 90's as 282 seniors twisted their rings and laughed nervously on graduation night. finally at 7:00 pm, terry arey started to play "pomp and circumstance." after they marched into the john lewis gym, reverend kidd delivered the baccalaureate address. mr. t. c. mcswain awarded honors and former principal mr. collin smith thanked seniors for the class gift—a portrait of him. at last diplomas were handed to the graduates, hats flew into the air, tassles were flipped, rings were turned, and suddenly it was all over.

salutatorian robyn walsh brings smiles to the graduating senior class as she reflects on never-to-be-forgotten memories of her lee days.

seniors advance, some happy, some sad, for that final roll call to receive that cherished diploma from principal, mr. charles kurtz.

afs, spanish club set, meet goals

Adespite not having an afs student this year, the afs club found plenty to keep them busy. the major theme the club operated on was that of earning money to support next year's student. such projects as a class penny drive and selling candy bars were supported. the penny drive was a project in which students of each class donated a penny and at the end of the drive the class which had donated the most won a prize. meanwhile, the spanish club participated in money raising activities, too. several bake sales were endeavored and succeeded in fattening up the pocketbook for the club. a spanish dinner was held featuring many exotic dishes.

girls, boys specialize in homemaking

determined not to be completely changed by the women's lib movement were the home ec. girls and their instructor, mrs. dorothy wood. scrumptious smells filled the corridors as these students practiced their culinary skill. they gave dinners, teas, and even had a mock wedding and reception. second year girls studied home nursing and child care to prepare for their future families. constructing clothing was also included in the homemaking course. speaking of construction, mr. donald roberts' industrial arts classes got their fill too. the boys had a type of home ec. course for themselves in which they learned to work with various tools requiring numerous skills and abilities. jigsaws buzzed and table saws gyrated throughout the long school days.

standing in perplexed fascination, junior debbie wilmer just can't seem to fathom out a floor smearing accident in home ec.

clicks, dings fill business classes

Clicks and dings of typewriters filled the lower end of the second floor as students punched at lettering to master the machines. a new course in personal typing on a pass-fail basis relieved the timing jitters for some students. adding machines churned as squiggles and lines flew across numerous pads in shorthand classes. vot students carried out their studies in actual employment.

pausing for a quick question from debi eriksen, mrs. sue wilson keeps tabs on the 25 other machines, making sure the work gets done.

valley tech is lab of experimenting students

Curling hair, climbing telephone poles, and fixing everything imaginable kept the hands of valley tech students busy. drills whirled as dryers hummed. compasses turned as car wheels spun. students experimented with other students while critical eyes watched. as dst went into effect, tech students found classes convening half an hour later. all lee students felt the effect as school opened fifteen minutes later to accommodate bused tech people.

gymnastics aids girls in co-ordination

Rolling, tumbling, and performing cartwheels were all a part of the girls' role in p. e. class as they undertook gymnastics. the girls also learned the basics of playing basketball, field hockey, and tennis. boys kept themselves in top shape through wrestling and weight lifting. in the classroom, sophomore girls and boys studied drivers' training and first aid. junior and senior girls studied medical self help, while the boys went into a complex study of football.

"gosh, i can't jump that high!" john tyler seems to be saying in an envious tone, as he watches his teammates reach to contact the volleyball.

novice drivers become experts with experience

Nervousness and butterflies accompanied students on the first day of their driver training course, but with a competent coach like paul hatcher, confidence began to rise. in each phys. ed. class, the fundamentals of safe driving were emphasized with the aid of textbooks, the overhead projector, and the usual gory films. also helping the training techniques was the porto-clinic which tested hopeful drivers' reaction time and visual abilities. students were still required to muster up scores of 36 in class and 7 on the road to be able to test their luck and their skill for that almighty license. speed-demons were cautiously warned to keep their thrills under 55 m.p.h. due to the energy shortage.

just cruisin' around in the driving range during study hall provides a welcome break from work for a sophomore in driver's training.

sca officers try to meet demands, wishes of students

The student cooperative association kept active, as it tried to meet the demands and carry out the ideas of the student body. presiding in the "no. 1" position was dicky hamrick, who had the tough job of appointing committees and playing "mommy" to make sure his helpers got their jobs done too. vice-president chuck morgan presided over the inner-club council and was always ready to step in for dicky. balancing and keeping a close eye on the school's money was robert price, treasurer. robert was also the chief operator of the school store and the magazine drive. completing all the secretarial work, which included typing up the meeting minutes and keeping an accurate scrapbook, was sharon harman, s.c.a. secretary.

voicing her ideas and opinions, senior barrie jo miller gains the floor of the sca meeting while others give her their undivided attention.

ah! the slow dance. what could possibly set the mood for the valentines' dance as well as soft music and easy movement?

making out their mischievous plans to "get ya where it hurts" are the valentine-midwinters' cupids, kathy moomaw and rufus tutwiler.

still contemplating or firmly decided students make their feelings known in the march sca elections to determine next year's leaders.

rocking to the progressive sounds of "colossus", lee students step out to make the first lee high singles' dance a happy success after the lengthy winter blues.

carrying out their voting responsibility, dana kier, sharon mahanes, and other concerned students cast their vote for next year's sca officers.

"rockin' the night away," many lee students tried their luck at the singles' dance which turned out to be a sweet success sponsored by the sca.

singles' dance, midwinter's top sca dance calendar

adding a little spice to the weekly drag, the sca sponsored two school dances. midwinter's held in february was actually a valentines dance. cupids circulated and "zapped" the hearts of dancers. couples were admitted to the singles dance, but the idea was to go alone and see what happened. the people had fun and the sca made money when both projects were completed.

huddled at the head of the gym, sca officers and new inductees shoot answers to the cross fire of questions typical of open sca meetings.

mixed reactions come from the presidential candidates as they hear the platforms of their opponents during the sca elections assembly.

new sca secretary, ann todd, follows the vows of sharon harman as '74-'75 officers are inducted and sca business comes to a close.

making it as a big star on the screen, paul edwards dedicates himself very seriously to the sca elections for the office of president.

sca elections reveal student body choices for leaders

Along with the first hint of spring came the yearly race for sca candidacy. student apathy seemed to wear off in relation to running for office, for each office had several students tying for a place. after a close runoff election, candidates were finally chosen and students found themselves bombarded from all sides with posters in the main hall, campaign speeches in the auditorium, and buttons urging them to vote. after a competitive race, thayer phillips took the presidency after a runoff with paul edwards; another runoff between ginger gilbert and robert price named ginger vice president. ann todd won the office of secretary while tony smith got the job of money-tender or treasurer.

audio visuals aid gov't, history

O riginal methods of teaching held the interest of social studies students throughout the school. history students learned the advantages of being able to work with closed circuit television equipment. they filmed reports and viewed specially prepared programs. government classes learned about the process of law through conducting mock trials and elections. in many classes, student teachers arrived with fresh and bright ideas. guest speakers came often to share their ideas with students in the classroom.

damsel not in distress, junior kathy metzgar catches every word in earning her perfect "a" average in mr. ned bonfoey's american history class.

friendship between man and his best pal, (david stump and a school visitor) are studied and tested in sociology class throughout the day. testing the effects of relaxing man's muscles, clinton bryant and earl nelson seem quite satisfied with the results in their soc. class.

students learn about society, economy

Economics and sociology attracted herds of students in their second year at lee. although most students took both one semester courses, it was not a requirement. mrs. marjorie langfitt came across with many hints on consumer protection while mrs. rebecca harvill managed to stir up hot feelings which exploded in class discussions on society.

tapes and tables solve chem. snarls

Cassette players and audio visual equipment aided this year's chem-study classes. slide rules and calculators also proved useful in equation solving. meanwhile, chemistry students studied the basic elements and learned the fundamentals of writing formulas. dissections in every sophomore's biology class progressed during the year from the earthworm to the squid. physic students aided their study of energy through experiments using weights and pulleys.

"eek!" sophomore barbara meyer is ready to leap back to her seat but realizes it's only a photographer invading biology class.

math causes students to sink or swim

Suddenly immersed in numbers, variables and seemingly endless pop art figures, the math crowd found themselves in a new underwater world. some sank and some swam while others glided through with no problems. swimming in everything from general math to calculus, students found varieties of problem solving waiting to capture their interest.

pondering over her math measurements, joyce armstrong can't decide whether her calculations are right or wrong even with a ruler's help.

manipulating thoughts with possible solutions to a math problem, dike rice gives the old thinking process a try as he sweats an answer out.

looking perplexed, susan yeago attempts to solve another geometry problem with the help of her math ruler, compass, and a little guessing.

searching for an easier way to do math, kim wagner tries her hand at matching the correct set of figures to the right problem in geometry.

"would you hold still!" a lee student seems to be pleading with his compass for the perfect circle, as he undergoes another geometry day.

smearing the blackboards with dislikes, likes, and locations, spanish one students take advantage of a chance to express themselves.

practicing pronunciation, laura bryant also gets a large dose of spanish culture and at the same time acquires a passable spanish accent.

students hook heads into electronic french

Tapes, headphones, and english-french dictionaries aided many students in understanding the basics of first year french. second and third years put the knowledge to practical use through the production of television commercials and plays. first year spanish students learned the basics of speaking spanish—often through memorizing and reciting dialogues. second and third year students went into more depth with the study of spanish culture.

oddly out of place for the moment in a spanish world, senior dana knopp relaxes and enjoys the peace while waiting for her turn to speak.

"what in the world are you doing to me?" mrs. pat trostle finds that becoming beautiful is easier with a little help from her friends.

lecturing means notes and notes and tests, as lisa harris rereads her own notes to make sure they're legible enough for later study.

varied courses enhance english classes

Many advanced senior english students relived childhood memories as they read and studied children's literature. other seniors undertook macbeth, while junior english classes studied the scarlet letter. reading, memorizing, and reciting became a part of the sophomore's role in english class as julius caesar came to life. grammar was also an important part of every english class, with students learning all the rules ranging from dangling participles to split infinitives.

puzzled looks evolve themselves in the daily routines of roger mackay and sherry hiner as they find that antagonizing antics are yet to come.

term papers crush the student and "research" echoes in his ear. sometimes handy books like these can be scratched from the library.

fha-ers display homemaking talent in various activities

Future homemakers of america received the outstanding chapter award in the state for their many varied activities. as fund raisers they sold brushes and cookbooks, held a bake sale, and sponsored the spring fling dance. for school community projects, fha-ers served the district deca contestants, the district choral advisers, and the sca mid winters dance. during national fha week march 31 — april 6, the chapter held a mother-daughter tea. the club achieved its success through the aid of its officers — president, merrie jo samuels; 1st vice-pres., kitty massie; 2nd vice-pres., janet hendrix; secretary, brenda starkey; treasurer, dana sensabaugh; historian, pam hurst; reporter, susan collins; and adviser, mrs. dorothy wood.

females infiltrate men's domain in mech. dr.

feminine infiltration was more noticeable than ever in the mechanical drawing classrooms. rulers and pencils turned this way and that as eyes shot from the master plans to the short skirts.

precise, thin lines connected to form a type of coded format. christmas projects brought the spirit to art classes. imaginative etchings, sketches, and paintings were as varied as the students themselves. trips to the fine arts center and journeys outdoors to create landscapes added flavor to art classes.

"i have just realized that i have no idea what i'm doing." phil swann puts something together for that all important six weeks grade.

surrounded by sharp angled precision instruments, joe binion carefully lays out a draft for a house in his mechanical drawing class.

making sure every detail is correct, michael trimble finds the ruler indispensable in creating blueprints in mechanical drawing.

working diligently on one of her several art projects, jane harman uses her creative ability to put the final touches on her model.

proving once again that mechanical drawing is not just for boys, junior donna corbin creates a layout in second year mechanical drawing.

getting the most out of rulers and compasses, junior dean mccoey quickly learns how important a steady hand is in mechanical drawing.

lee choristers shake rafters, host regionals

Causing the rafters of lee high to shake were the talented students found in mr. boisa taylor's chorus.

highlighting the year for choir members was the district V regional chorus held at lee in february. choristers spent many hours preparing for this event, and the weekend was pronounced a success. many fund-raising projects were held as members strove to buy new robes and a new p.a. system. extra practices, outside of school hours, were held to prepare for the many concerts held. madrigal singers performed 16th century madrigals at the spring concert while the lee lites rocked to the sound of "aquarius." the lee chorale performed many numbers to the theme of "i believe in music."

eyes glued to the director and oblivious to everything except the song seems to give the chorus an intense look of dedication.

who's the ham? it's hard to decide with the rest of the gang planning a surprise attack on jayne kiscaden and the photographer during drama.

drama classes learn finesse of productions

Acting, directing, and applying make-up were just a few of important basics stressed in drama one and two classes taught by mrs. diane wymer. the drama department started out by presenting a one act christmas play, "the mouse who didn't believe in santa", to children in king's daughters' hospital and various local churches. the department also presented three one act plays open at night to the public with "a western melodrama" presented in the district one act play festival. meanwhile, in its second year, music literature class under the direction of mr. boisa taylor learned to appreciate the different forms and eras of music. music was played almost daily to allow students to develop the ability to identify various instruments, tempos, and rhythms.

rehearsal has its lighter moments with wilbur johnson giving vent to the accumulated tension which builds with weeks of hard work.

kneeling to princess carol butler, the court jester, philip andrews, discovers how to give her the moon in a rehearsal of many moons.

personalities of the characters project to the audience as the play climaxes and perils of purity are overcome by the knock-kneed hero.

"just one more line across this way and you'll be perfect." wilbur johnson guarantees that all of his actresses are beautiful.

shakespeare, alias john hodes, haunts the classroom as students question his value. anita tutwiler and larry johnson can't believe it.

intent on the play or a passing tête-a-tête is the question before joey hodes and anita pilson as they watch other drama students perform.

"childhood sweethearts" sherry hiner and philip andrews paint on nervous smiles and lunge into the parts of bashful lovers.

facing listeners, jeff brooks stands firm to haze green, phil andrews, and carol keirigan. sherry hiner lets a giggle slip at practice.

plays fulfill drama dept.'s goal of success

Success was the theme of this year's drama department beginning with the fall production "blithe spirit" which netted a record crowd. the play starred martha mizzi as billy moran's first wife who returned from the dead to haunt his second wife, acting out excerpts from one of shakespeare's plays, kathy garris, terry pierce, eugene pendleton, and sharon dodson perform in drama class.

sherry ramsey. spring brought the one-act play festival with john hodge as "shakespeare", a firehouse comedy, "four bells means glory", and a confused farce," the great western melodrama." the latter won the contest and traveled to roanoke to receive an excellent rating. to wrap up the year, a thespian banquet was held at ingleside to initiate new members and reward the students who had made outstanding contributions to drama during the year.

drill team members create routines to entertain fans

Parading onto the field at half time was lee high's own drill team under the direction of mrs. carolyn kinzie. affiliated with the "marching leemen," the two talented groups combined to give some fantastic performances. co-captains were sherry armstrong and sharon ervine. participating at a special camp the past summer, ginny byrd and julie simantel received some helpful know-how and some new ideas for various routines. short skirts and pretty smiles joined together to make the girls a winning asset to lee's band, along with the many hours of hard practice every morning, dedicated by each member.

pooped out from a long practice, the drill team listens to some final instructions before heading back to six long hours of school.

aching feet are painful but drill team members roxie stone and dede wagner find the thought of a band trip to va. beach a good remedy.

correct carriage is the topic of discussion as "the out of sight blue and white" girls listen to mrs. kinzie put vigor into marching.

early morning practice, complete with sun in sleepy eyes, gives the day a painful start for the girls who march with the drill team.

state flag bearer denise shipman and u.s. flag bearer diane iten lean against their poles and concentrate on the new color guard routine.

teamwork and patience are essential in the successful running of a senior class even with a helpful advisor like mrs. becky harvill.

joking around with a bit of humor, miss vicki jarvis uses her friendly personality to capture joe binion's cooperation in spanish class.

contributing his time to the students' interests, junior counselor mr. john mozian gains complete cooperation from the entire student body.

enjoying her role as "victim" in the p.e. first aid course, junior ginny byrd seems to have nothing wrong except a bad case of giggles.

co-operating is key note in varied school activities

Sports, dramatics, music, clubs, art, physical education, the list of co-operating activities goes on and on. that's the way it was with most of lee's programs — they ran on involvement and co-operation.

extra activities such as powder puff and student-faculty games depended on these factors. concerts, art shows, and ball games, math class, use of the media center, and cafeteria lines—all for one.

"you better make those baskets or else . . .," coach paul hatcher threatens to attain team co-operation one way or the other by adding more heat.

smiles and gestures let everyone know that the score's leemen sided as the cheerleaders point at the scoreboard and say, it's nice.

trying to demonstrate cooperation and friendliness, leemen dean crawford finds it a bit difficult after suffering defeat in a close game.

combining track skills and complete cooperation, the champions of various sections gather together to compete against each other.

marching leemen rise, shine with sun

have you ever wondered what it is like to be a marching leeman? it meant being at school at 7:30 a.m. practicing in a muddy field with temperatures around freezing. although there were many hardships, they were awarded with praise from the lee fans as they performed their halftime shows.

hula girls, skiers, hearts, and the map of the united states were formed as the band played popular tunes to the beat of band major, mark haston. under the direction of mr. robert sanger, the band played the national anthem for the pre-game show. not only did they play for the lee high games, but they showed their skills to fans at bridgewater college.

participating in staunton's annual christmas parade, they provided various tunes of the season. they received third place honors at the harrisonburg christmas parade.

cheering and shouting with enthusiasm, the lhs band proves to be worthy of promoting school spirit as well as half-time entertainment.

clad in heavy winter coats, members of the marching band spend a cold morning practicing for one of their fabulous halftime shows.

stage band entertains staunton with rock, jazz

Ieaning toward jazz and rock beats, the lee stage band provided entertainment throughout the community of staunton. they performed for the two junior highs and for vsdb. they also participated in the stage band festival held at charlottesville. before most students are out of bed, mr. sanger and the members of the concert band were at school practicing for the district band festival and for the concerts they gave throughout the year. at the district festival at madison college, they received an excellent rating. the gas shortage hindered the band from going too far for their annual spring trip. just the same they managed to have a successful weekend at virginia beach.

while introducing the next number, mr. robert sanger gives the audience some musical insight and background information for the next numbers.

playing their rendition of woody herman's "woodchopper's ball", the stage band revives the big band swing sound popular in the forties.

performing one of many musical selections, jerry warner and david pelney of the stage band add their own touches to please j.l. students.

proving that practice makes perfect, trumpeteer kevin miller sounds out loud and clear while performing for the john lewis students.

demonstrating the other side of stage band, senior richard flanagan runs through a number one more time on his practice pad.

mounted behind a mountain of drums, michael hanger checks the set and prepares to count down the song at the john lewis concert.

"uncle sam" senior scotty scott practices during a debate club meeting his "we want you" stance in preparation for things to come.

planting his views into listeners' minds is easy for billy moran as he backs his opposition to weekday religious education with facts.

"it ain't all work," brent fielding certainly improves his grammar for the actual debate meet but relaxes for an informal session.

one minute left. judges listen to the speakers, and students marvel at their foreknowledge as the debate assembly arouses controversy.

debate team stirs up student interest in assembly

Coming from the shadows, the debate club began to shine as they strove to stir up student interest. during an assembly, president "scotty" scott, vice-president billy moran, secretary paul edwards, and charlie foster displayed their abilities. plans were made to start after school sessions once a week for students who wanted to observe the teams' activities. new equipment was purchased. a trophy rewarded the efforts of the debaters late in march.

refuting what the affirmative side says takes much listening and notes, as scotty scott prepares a reply at the debate assembly.

Fresh ideas and new approaches to standard practices are up for grabs as several leeword reporters re-hash tentative plans for lee insight.

puzzled over the components of their camera, mrs. claudette obenschain and elaine miller put their heads together to correct the mechanisms.

propagating new material for lee's underground newspaper, freeword, lester bowers adds his personal touches to guarantee eye-catching results.

literary talent is revealed in journalism

Journalism was a flourishing field at Lee High. With the leeword, the freeword, peacock ice, and lee journal, student involvement reached even higher levels. Unlike the leeword or lee journal, peacock ice was published solely on contributions from the student body at large. Pam Davis and Preston Brennaman were at the head of the literary magazine's staff. lee journal was a taped radio production done by the public speaking classes and aired by WTON on alternate Saturdays. Two separate tapes were made by the students and Mrs. Diane Wymer chose the best. The leeword was written and published by the journalism class under the direction of Mrs. Claudette Obenschain.

Planning and preparing the next issue of peacock ice, Miss Connie Harris reviews the materials and topics for creativeness and ability.

Creating, proof-reading, and composing, Lee's peacock ice staff works diligently to prepare their annually literary magazine for publication.

"picture day" keeps annual members, allen earman and julie parrott, hustling under the direction of mrs. terry boyle.

use of a vivid imagination and a steady hand characterize the layouts of senior, anita wilkerson, as she designs another leeway page.

leeway staff struggles to meet deadlines

frantic leeway staff members sweated and jittered as they raced against the clock and the calendar to turn out an annual. pictures were snapped, developed, out, and captioned as the year's happenings poured from the writers' pens. exhausted sighs and grief-filled cries echoed through room 32 as the year flew by. every picture and every word was pondered over, improved, and perfected.

cropping odd sized pictures to fit even odder sized spaces, all comes out right under the capable hands of staff worker, linda wimer.

pondering into space is anita wilkerson who pays no attention to the dexterity of philip swann while working in annual study hall.

money transactions are but another duty on the list of responsibilities that mrs. terry boyle takes as advisor for and savior of the staff.

students, staff all 'round out'

Piece by piece, the stained glass window grew and fitted together. "hey, this goes along with the theme!" was a frequent outcry of the editor. based on the belief that throwing people into categories is becoming a thing of the past, the stained glass window was conceived to reflect growing unity. all of the different people were at school for one basic purpose. all of the different athletes were working for victory. all of the different singers strove for a great-sounding choir. ideas were tested and put to work until the window rounded out.

"what can i say about a picture like that?" betsy reardon looks at the photograph one more time and does a little caption brainstorming.

energy crisis? well, at least one lee student does his bit to conserve fuel by riding his bike to school instead of one of the jammed-up cars.

"happy motoring" is not quite the impression that stauntonians get when they go in search for that precious gasoline at 55¢ a gallon.

fuel shortages reduce traffic and heat

Motivation is hindered, people panic, thermostats go down, and the empty gas cans appeared into mind. electricity—that voltaic gold was slowly receding to its hiding place. 1973-74—the era of blankets and sweaters found its way into lee high. arriving at school, lee students were approached by icy hands waiting to clasp shut on them. time was pushed up an hour to conserve energy, but it felt pretty strange coming to school when you thought you just went to bed due to the darkness. stauntonians were hassled by numerous closures of gas stations and nearly outrageous gasoline prices. bicycling became a popular transportation trend. those pleasure trips on the weekend were almost completely terminated for fear that there was no gas for the return trip home. if motivation was the key to advancement, then was fuel the key to motivation?

facilities inspire, encourage student interest

Making use of the television equipment, the journalism class spent a six week's period on television production. video tape recorders, monitors, cameras, lights, and microphones were used to record the mock trials that government students put on.

everything was at the students' disposal and the equipment helped as it enabled them to see exactly what they had done.

bygone worlds and those to come, mankind, pondered, analyzed, and cataloged in the library, finds some effect on students.

bundled against the cold, football manager, greg richardson, stands by with a clean ball in case it's needed on the field.

superstars bring fame to lee

Fame came to the superstars of the team as they moved into the limelight with a victorious 6-4 season. preacher maddox, a long established talent, battled his way to win the coveted golden helmet award for the second time. sharing the position of quarterback with david huffer, richie mcdonough kept one eye on the scoreboard. leonard robinson ran through a tunnel of opponents that mark and don harlow dug. ronnie and rusty boyers, james wallace, t. g. mace, and tony hamilton combined forces to lead a staunch defense.

switching latin for football statistics, mr. paul espresso keeps everything straight while mr. bob walton cheers the offense on.

victory is sweet and feels even sweeter as jay lancaster, rusty boyers, and cameron pritt chat on the sideline in the final minutes.

keeping law and order, several staunton policemen may be seen every friday night during the season at memorial stadium.

grasping one of his "sons" (tg mace), coach don wilson transmits an idea that apparently flashed through his brain.

leemen run as steaming locomotive

jubilance was expressed by head coach don wilson as he reflected about the 1973-74 football campaign. a record of six wins and four losses proved that coach wilson molded the leemen into a more smoothly running machine than had previously chugged across memorial stadium. engineering the offense, coach bob walton devised a masterful attack and an overpowering running game. defense functioned easily under wes meeteer and dave shell while paul espresso coupled recording statistics and pitching levity.

digging in for a seige on the fleming offense, lee linemen try not to allow any yardage before getting back the ball.

lunging desperately at a william fleming back, rusty boyers' sticky fingers barely hang on in an attempt to stop a big gain.

eyes glued to the field, mr. charles kurtz and mr. delmer botkin strain to see what's happening inches from the goal post.

packed stands tremble with excitement as hundreds of fans flock to watch the leemen battle through another football game.

proving that everybody takes a lump or two out on the field, chuck boone plows ahead for yardage despite a fleming obstruction.

'baby leemen' pull 6-1 record

Iack of size didn't seem to bother the "baby leemen" football squad, for their power on the defensive line brought them a season record of 6-1. middle linebacker, nat crawford, piled up 47 tackles in 6 games. harrisonburg was the only victorious team against lee, for they pulled out ahead with an 8-6 ballgame. after that first game, the leemen only gave up 26 points for the rest of the season. under the coaching of robert wright and paul espresso, linebackers, glen flavin, dean stuart, hiner hamrick and gary heston, showed outstanding work.

pulling and straining every possible muscle, varsity basketball players engage in a tug of war for possession of the precious sphere.

"ain't no way you're shooting over me!" haze green literally touches the ceiling in his efforts to prevent a shot by a fleming player.

leg dodging eugene pendleton makes a quick swipe at the ball for another steal and easy layup against a taller william fleming guard.

gritting his teeth in determination, junior forward dean crawford takes an off balance shot against a bigger lewis squad.

18-3 season brings spirit home again

Graduation sent a great number of starters away from lee last year and forced her to start afresh with haze green, the only big man. smallness did not keep the leemen from winning the regular roanoke valley district play with a 18-3 record. leading the way during the season, dean crawford won the district scoring race and landed a spot on the all district team. eugene pendleton, mark haston, and frankie crawford provided uncountable contributions that supported the record.

remembering staunton as the home of the "super fans" won't be hard for patrick henry after being stunned by their enthusiasm.

coach hatcher steers team to roanoke

Ramed as outstanding coach of the area, paul hatcher proved his talent with the leemen. he led the team all the way to the roanoke valley tournaments only to lose to the jefferson magicians in the closing seconds. coach jim digges added his share of basketball strategy as he acted as varsity assistant coach and jv head coach.

demonstrating some proof of his leaping ability, john stuart sails for a bucket despite constantly being at a height disadvantage.

making the other player earn every point he gets is no easy job as junior mark haston barely misses blocking a william fleming shot.

"up, up, and away" goes eugene pendleton as he chalks up another two points to assure a victorious basketball game to the lee high fans.

waiting for his turn to prove his skills and abilities on the basketball court is tony hamilton, a determined member of the lee varsity team.

"it don't come easy," seems to be on the minds of the leemen as they scrutinize their team's plays and try to develop some helpful pointers.

"get up off that floor, eugene." struggling and squirming for the precious basketball is one of the many traits of lee's own eugene pendleton.

smallness in height doesn't hurt lee jv's

featuring small players, the lee junior varsity basketball team rolled to a tie for second place in the district only to lose to patrick henry in the tournament. coach jim digges provided leadership and helped mold a little team into a big defensive machine. leading the rebounding were nat crawford and david chaffins. providing the offensive push were walter lewis, scotty johnson, and robert brown. defense shined all through the season and helped compensate for shortcomings on offense.

bodies twist, turn over $5000 mats

a novice to the lee sports scene, wrestling made its appearance for the first time. groans and moans were heard from the gym as wrestlers twisted and turned the bodies of their opponents. rolling over the $5,000 mats, the leemen won only one match due to inexperience. the team was categorized according to weight.

long practice fits in lives of cheerleaders

Egressed from the corridors of lee high came a vivacious squad of spirited varsity cheerleaders. nothing but hard work and innumerable hours of tedious practice generated these girls to an excelled quality. yelling, jumping, crying, and laughing were all components of these 1973-74 cheerleaders. on the varsity roster were ginger rowe, iris wells, donna swink, sharyn goode, caryl porte, pam wilkerson, dana knopp, evelyn ware, cindy cuculic, and their forever-faithful captain, ginny buckland. the girls participated in the quarterback club parade and the christmas parade spreading good cheer to all those who attended. acquiring the roles of secret pals, the cheerleaders filled the players' lockers with tempting goodies and loads of good luck wishes. once again school spirit lived at lhs.

a little extra pep comes in handy at an away game at andrew lewis as the cheerleaders "climb to the top" in a break between over-times.

taking it easy before a basketball game, laura desportes relieves the nervous tension with a smiling face for the photographer.

showing off some of their cheerleading abilities are carolyn hamrick and ruth fitzgerald at one of the girls' basketball games.

'pepability' excels with the '74 j.v.'s

Pambling on and on, this group of inspiring girls cheered to win the hearts of multitudinous sport fans. enduring practice sessions became a principal part of each jv cheerleader's daily life routine. winning, joyous tears, crying, losing tears all consolidated together throughout the 1973-'74 season. on the junior varsity roster were ruth fitzgerald, pam bryant, jane rankin, michele shelton, laura desportes, carolyn hamrick, terry pierce, teresa bennett, lindsey harvill, and their determined captain, cortney ayers. these girls exerted their pep in numerous girls' basketball games as well as the methodical jv football and basketball games. filling the players' lockers with scrumptious goodies and loads of good luck wishes was one of the many responsibilities of the jv cheerleaders. "pepability" was excelled to a superior status at lee high.

sunshine and warm smiles heat spirit to the perfect temperature as j.v. cheerleaders cook up batches of spectator support.

"i'll sock it to you!" teases john stuart, president of the senior class, as he aims to smash a pie into the face of charles kurtz.

balloons, pep, crepe paper spark spirit

Sweeping the school with zest abundant, we found the pep club hard at work cheering the leemen on to victory. game mornings we saw these members decorating lockers with balloons, signs, and crepe paper as well as the food which inspired hard work for the team. infiltrating the halls with their buttons and pizza stationery, this club exerted so much zeal that the whole school became active. goal post decorations as well as game tickets were purchased with the funds. ever promoting school spirit, they led a fifties' day with all the antique clothes dragged out of trunks and donned. the pep club joined in a loud cheer of, "get it on leemen."

recovering from a well-placed pie, mr. alfonso hamilton becomes the laughing stock of the student body, helped by his son, anthony.

surrounded by an enthusiastic crowd, senior class president john stuart takes another step up the ladder to cream mr. charles kurtz.

listening and attempting to come up with some unusual fund raising ideas, lhs pep club members put their brains and efforts together.

varsity baseball starts strong but submits later

Streaking to victory early in the season but submitting later, the varsity baseball team finished with 5 wins and 8 losses. swinging a heavy bat for the team was leading hitter and mvp jeff beach. tossing 3 winning games was jeff kirtz, outstanding pitcher.

co-captain eddie bailes along with larry king, bob grover and mark welcher helped form a smooth defensive team. providing the support and inspiration throughout the year in baseball and the fca was coach bob walton.

girls' tennis win at district, lose at state tourneys

Rebounding from a bad year and graduation losses the girls' tennis team rode to a 4-7 record. two doubles teams won at district and sectionals, only to fall at state tourneys at the end of the season. to form a powerful doubles team were most valuable players, francis simmons and susie miska. they went on to win district and sectionals by beating the runner-up team of lisa dabney and tucker smith. withstanding the foursome on trips to places such as wythville was coach peggy o'dell. playing singles at district were robyn walsh and marge flanagan. rounding out the team was doubles team sandy bonin and rebecca cowan and singles player, connie meinhard.

praying the thing will go over with a last desperation shot, lisa dabney ignores the fact that she's on a collision course with a pole.

boys' tennis improves with age and experience

erupting from an 0-8 record their first year, the boys' tennis team surged to a 4-7 record in their second year under coach bill mccar-rick. serving in the top spot was ju-nior transfer from north carolina john trammel, most valuable player.

lee women bring district title home

Lee was struck rich with success in its second year of supporting a girls' basketball team. coach peggy o'dell led her team to be number one in the northwestern district as they came home with a smashing victory over central high of woodstock. they ended their season with a 15-1 record. their one defeat was in the first game. the "leewomen" were found at the bottom of a 31-27 score giving lane the game. shirley jones, susie miska, and judy bonin led the team in scoring and rebounding. shirley had a total of 273 points for the season. keeping on their toes, adrine morgan and sandy yancey exercised their quick reflexes. shirley jones was voted the most valuable player and judy bonin, the most spirited. since the whole team devoted many hours of practice and hard work, they all received letters. defense was the key word in coach pat mccool's book as the lee j.v. girls' basketball team posted an undefeated season in its first year. chris dunnings was quick on defense. the jv's held all but one team, turner ashby, in collecting more than 20 points. leading in rebounding barbara meyer scored 100 rebounds and judene crawford 75. the scoring leaders were chris dunnings and karen sanger. karen received the high individual mark of 16 points against lexington.

court congestion results as lisa dabney and judy cottrell clash together. arms and legs fly to recover the basketball.

bored by slow proceedings debbie bridges uses the aid of a free hand to keep her head high during a national honor society meeting.

nhs adds new members in fall, spring

Crisp autumn and blossoming spring brought forth new inductees for the national honor society. following the two induction ceremonies, a tea was held for the parents and new members of the society. to attain membership into the society a scholastic record of 90 for seniors and 92 for juniors had to be held for a four year period. advised by mr. john house, members chose officers to provide leadership next year. presiding over society members, david yeago encouraged them to offer their scholastic talents as a service to others who requested tutoring.

addressing the new members of the national honor society, mr. john house conducts the induction ceremony with distinction and clarity.

proudly accepting her certificate, tucker smith pauses to shake hands with nhs president david yeago before becoming a bona fide member.

delivering his speech on the qualifications of nhs members, eddie bailes uses past experiences and present hopes for the rising seniors.

"oh my nerves . . ." mr. wes meeteer discovers the benefits of his morning jogs; they give him a second wind for the last week of school.

sky rockets and fireworks are the most typical mark of the last day of school as many students set up elaborate shows.

a couple of dr. peppers and a mountain dew send susie miska and susan hanger into ecstasy as the cool liquid soothes parched throats.

exams, locker clean out point out the end of school

Laughter filled the school as notes were crammed into huge hall trash cans. a few lucky seniors managed to escape the stress of final exams with exemption. the weather became mellow and suddenly the prom and the senior picnic were more important than homework. most were glad to see it end. some seniors had second thoughts. lee high school sighed and smiled as she watched over 1,000 students float down her hill and into summer.

hard at work taking notes, cindy coffey sticks to her books in hopes of earning the right not to take any exams in senior exemptions.

dancing out of doors and briskly casting his books onto the pavement, this student expresses his joy at seeing school end at long last.

entertaining his amused friends one last time, mark sterrett climbs high up to the ceiling and imitates his very "favorite" teacher.

REPAIR-RING

varied expressions grip the hodge-podge of different faces as all minds turn to the hot action on the basketball court.

hot cars and drag races, pot parties and rock concerts, ball games and sweaty locker rooms. scholarship and nhs. prayer meetings and spiritual help. drama, art, and music. people in all shapes and sizes; each with a dream and a goal radically different, but united in a spring-time ## people unite to form a novel society

youth. reds, whites, and blues marvel at purples and pinks, while yellows and greens wonder at oranges and browns. melting into one school for one specific reason, a full education is ultimately achieved in this one building society. indeed we are rounding out.

pausing from her daily routine of secretarial work for a quick picture is mrs. thelma brown, an office staff member who does tons of paper work.

"the great thinker" is exemplified by lee high's own delmer botkin as he searches for new improvements to liven up school practices.

"hey, one at a time!" mr. charles kurtz seems to be saying as everyone tries to get his attention and approval at the same time.

besides living up to the role of a high school principal, mr. charles kurtz acted as chairman of the virginia high school league. mr. delmer botkin, assistant principal, was also the school's athletic director. florida was visited by mr. alphonso hamilton. mr. hamilton and his family toured disney world, silver springs, and ocean world. mrs. thelma brown performed the secretarial duties in her 20th year in the school system. myrtle beach, south carolina was the vacation spot of mrs. june zeigler. Fifty unfortunate flounder were caught by mrs. sherry simantel and her family when they travelled to ocean city, maryland. mrs. simantel found pleasure in weekend camping trips and collecting recipes.

outside world lures principals, secretaries

helping floundering students and teachers alike to straighten out their days, mrs. sherry simantel gladly aids mrs. diane wymer.

holding his glasses in his hand, mr. alphonso hamilton plays the smiling disciplinarian as he looks up from the detention hall roster.

smiling from her corner of the office, mrs. june ziegler prepares to attack another stack of paperwork from mr. charles kurtz's desk.

library is changed to media center

bombarded with all new equipment and learning materials, lee's library became the "media center" with mrs. elmira fountaine serving as audio-visual technician and mrs. angelo cacciapaglia the print specialist. director of the media center, mrs. nell wright, found herself continuously busy with the constant use of visual aids. in the guidance department, the secretaries, mrs. katherine brooks, mrs. opal homan, and mrs. mary lou parkins worked to keep transcripts typed and files in order while mrs. clara cummins, mr. ernie holley, and mr. john mozian counseled students.

presenting the goodies and baddies on student records isn't a rueful experience for mr. john mozian while offering bank assistance.

guiding the guidance counselors, mrs. mary lou parkins records and files all of the day to day records that follow everybody.

explaining the importance of selecting necessary subjects for college bound students, mr. ernie holley uses his time to prepare lee students.

dedicated and determined, Mrs. Clara Cummins does piles of book work while proving to be a very helpful and understanding guidance counselor.

determining class ranks for the junior and senior classes, Mrs. Opal Homan calculates every point to inform the students of their averages.

surrounded by various media center paraphernalia, Mrs. Nell Wright introduces the audio-visual material as a new aid for students.

programming her next TV taping, Mrs. Elnora Fountaine demonstrates the correct procedures for a successful filming in the media center.

enjoying the switch from history teacher to media center specialist, Mrs. "C" takes a moment to pick up a misplaced book.

expounding upon the valid points of the works currently under analysis, mrs. jean daniels conducts her classes on an adult level.

teaching while she files, mrs. claudette obenschain explains and illustrates the fundamentals of journalism to new reporters.

lee values piano playing journalist

besides her position as advisor to the leeword much of claudette obenschain's spare time involved crocheting, piano playing and photography. miss diann lehman worked on her masters thesis during her summer vacation. painting her house and traveling to england managed to keep mrs. jean daniels occupied during the previous easter and summer. leeway advisor, terry boyle showed her champion dachshunds and swung a good bat in the women's city softball league. an avid reader and record collector, mrs. virginia martin enjoyed her summer traveling throughout historic new england.

standing up the whole day at the blackboard can get tiring, so mrs. diane lehman takes a break while hearing student reports.

adventure in early american literature comes alive as mrs. terry boyle shows juniors what life was all about "way back then".

sorcery, knights in shining armor, days of feasting, and medieval castles come alive with mrs. virginia martin's special touches.

quickly reacting to a student's witty comment, miss bea morris shows that a good sense of humor is essential to a well rounded class.

english teachers lead busy lives

Iee's english teachers proved to be as busy outside the classroom as they were in. their interests ranged from reading and needlepoint to training dogs. miss linda carter, in her first year at lee, trained her irish setter, katie, while mrs. patricia gantt, also a newcomer to staunton's school system, enjoyed reading, sewing and decorating her new home. mrs. martha hamrick also kept a busy schedule with the building of a new camp on middle river. miss beatrice morris made singing her hobby. mrs. diane wymer headed up the thespian society and all dramatic productions, and miss connie harris kept the peacock ice staff organized.

heading up all dramatic productions means a hectic schedule, but mrs. diane wymer takes time to stop and relax from a busy day.

a little bit of humor always helps to break the ice as miss linda carter attempts to assure her english class that she wants to be friends.

tinkering with the projector is only the first step of showing a filmstrip for mrs. martha hamrick as she teaches her english classes.

shuffling merrily through a pile of paper money, mrs. pat gantt takes time out from teaching to indulge in a moment of quiet.

spicing up her english classes with a bit of humor, miss connie harris attempts to capture her students with laughter and a relaxed atmosphere.

"i am going to town yesterday"? mrs. pat trostle is unable to hold back a laugh before suggesting that her students drag out their texts.

teaching her class with a bit of humor, miss vicky jarvis demonstrates how correct spanish be written and punctuated with accuracy.

mexico, music, dogs fill lives of linguists

bringing the reality of spanish to her students, mrs. patty trostle chaperoned a trip to mexico this summer as well as finding time and energy to teach school. miss vickie jarvis kept her interest in music kindled while she instructed first and second year spanish students. a newcomer to the spanish department, mrs. brenda wright, found raising, training, and showing dogs to be a rewarding experience. acting as language department head, mrs. karen scott also worked to impress the art of french upon her students.

passing out good grades seems to put a smiling face on mrs. karen scott as she stresses correct pronunciation in her french classes.

"parlez-vous a humma humma?" mrs. carolyn kinzie freezes to the sounds of "new french" before offering a more valid answer.

funny dialogues help to make spanish appealing as mrs. brenda wright finds the story of daniela's long false eyelashes worth a smile.

deductions . . . children, compensations? w-2 form, file, 1040 form . . . spring brings income taxes to mrs. jo meeks' government classes.

using the old flutter hand to emphasize a point, mr. jim digges unfolds a vast record of empires and dominions in his history classes.

hand gestures emphasize the important points as miss sarah palmer lectures to her government classes on the workings of communism.

former sma teacher ned bonfoey enjoys having young ladies in his class as lynne stoops adds sparkle to the routine of history class.

oddities of consumerism produce laughs as mrs. marge langfitt hangs on to the podium during a class discussion in economics.

social science teachers lead students

advising john stuart and co. of the senior class kept mrs. rebecca harvill busy, while mr. don wilson's football team did battle on the field. mrs. jo meeks' jv and varsity cheerleaders cheered them on. sma gave lee mr. ned bonfoey, who had been commandant of cadets for two years there. concern over the environment gave mrs. marge langfitt reason to guide the environment committee. membership of the lee guidance committee and standards of quality council kept mr. don hamilton active, besides acting as public relations writer for the school board.

floating from room to room from period to period can really be a hassle as mrs. virginia obenschain has to tote along everything.

inspiration and encouragement are pumped into the seniors by their class advisor, mrs. becky harvill, who offers her help whole heartedly.

"now what?" mr. don hamilton, history department head, attacks his load of responsibility with the aid of his trusty typewriter.

tired from a morning jog in the park, mr. don wilson relaxes a moment before re-entering a raging world of men and mice in history.

knocking on the blackboard to attract wandering eyes, miss linda riley finds a way to hold attention during the pre-christmas week.

seemingly as puzzled as his math students, mr. james christy attempts to offer solutions to a very perplexing problem in his geomery class.

wheels in motion, thought intense, mr. jay higgs stays busy with the mountain of test papers from his algebra students.

demonstrating the correct pattern of a sine wave, mrs. sara hanger teaches her algebra-trig. classes the step-by-step drawing procedures.

taking time from correcting papers, mrs. patricia kidd points out one of the weirder figures students learn in geometry.

math teachers save money in activities

Interest of lee's math teachers extended from the classrooms. mr. jay higgs spent his spare time bowling and shooting pool. sponsoring the junior class and the afs club took up many extra hours of mr. william roberson. target shooting fascinated mr. james christy while the flower world captivated mrs. sara hanger. miss linda riley found making things interesting as she saved and knitted in her spare time. camping and hand crafts found their way into mrs. patricia kidd's open weekends and extra hours.

working on a book of tales from an italian childhood or taking the roll, mr. angelo cacciapaglia livens things up with his "slugs."

"why me?" mrs. wanda poe ponders the age old question while anxious dissector "operates" on his first frog specimen in biology.

learning is a two way business when james washington explains the way to do "his thing" to mrs. isabel mcswain during biology.

any lost chemistry student can find ready help from mr. olin miller on anything from periodicals to complicated equations.

travelling traps fancy of teachers

Foreign lands tasted america this summer when science teachers traveled abroad. austria was the vacation spot of mr. john house. miss marietta beverage journeyed to mexico with mrs. pat trostle's group. trips to honolulu, guam, and japan were taken by mrs. isabel mcswain. "shutterbugging" captured the interest of mr. angelo cacciapaglia. in her first year of teaching, mrs. wanda poe found pleasure in playing the piano and the guitar.

injecting his vitality and sometimes scary philosophy of the future into his classes, mr. john house spells out a new kind of learning.

displaying a type of sponge, miss marietta beverage strives to make biology an interesting learning experience for her students.

instructors remain active during year

Farming remained the major interest of mr. donald roberts, who also sponsored the sca. mrs. dorothy wood found time to embroider as she nursed a broken ankle that she received in a fall while grocery shopping. to relax and enjoy himself, mr. boisa taylor sang and danced. he also acted as counsellor at massanetta music camp and attended two seminars at massanetta springs.

showing the marching band banner to a band member, mr. robert sanger works to organize the multi-member band into a smoothly running unit.

pausing to weigh the facts, mr. don roberts concentrates on a way to explain theories of industrial arts to his class of rising handy-men.

sometimes a sense of humor comes in handy for industrial art teacher ronald gough when it all boils down to some silly mistake.

"one, two, three . . ." beat giving chorus director mr. boisa taylor meets the end of a long day on the auditorium stage in shirt sleeves.

helping her girls plan mock weddings is only part of the fun for mrs. dorothy wood. here, she views the finished product.

lee trains tomorrow's businessmen

Young businessmen and women have ample opportunities to build for their futures at lee high. even though business comes before pleasure, the teachers have their fun, too. mrs. sue wilson enjoyed sewing, reading, cooking, and showing cats, while another animal lover, mr. j. phenix williams enjoyed raising tropical fish. helping the senior class is among the many pastimes of miss louise terry. although mrs. sue morley found time to help the seniors, too, she also enjoyed golfing, swimming, and playing bridge. converting her pleasure into business orientated activities, mrs. olive h. couch devoted her spare time to the roles of treasurer of soroptimist club and also the secretary of business and professional women's club. these teachers have also found pleasure in teaching the various business subjects at lee as indicated by their 69 combined years of dedication.

trying to prepare her students for their future business professions is mrs. sue wilson as she points out the preciseness of bookkeeping.

reading handwriting is no problem when grading typing manuscripts as miss louise terry digs out a stack of waiting tests.

dictating passages as fast as she can from the words is a good drill for future secretaries as mrs. sue morley ignores flurrying fingers.

"if all else fails, resort to the eraser" mrs. olive couch explains the not so unique technique of mistake fixing to senior mona tate.

squinting, mrs. doris collins watches girls practice tennis in the park as phys. ed. classes march to the courts in warm weather.

rolled-up pants legs, sunglasses, lawn chairs, and those crazy beach hats mark the beginning of summer sports, for mrs. peggy o'dell.

locking his class in a stern scowl, coach bob walton establishes discipline to strengthen leadership in his third year as coach.

hand on the car door, driver's ed. teacher paul hatcher doubles as coach and instructor to sophomores who want to learn driving skills.

standing in for mrs. doris collins, mrs. diann mace works with girls in classroom phys. ed. and listens to ideas during first semester.

shooting a sideways glance at the ball, wes meeteer tries some fancy shots to kill time at the end of the period and entertain spectators.

p.e. teachers double as coaches

Lee high's p.e. teachers did more than teach physical education and health to sophomores, juniors, and seniors. keeping busy in her second year at lee, mrs. peggy o'dell coached the girls' basketball and tennis teams. taking over for mrs. doris collins in teaching girls' phys. ed. first semester was mrs. diann mace. aside from serving as coach for the varsity basketball team, paul hatcher had his own book, the stack offense—the basketball clinic published. coaching the indoor and outdoor track teams kept wes meeteer busy, while bob walton served as head-baseball coach and advisor to the fca.

advertising, merchandising, and selling can be awfully confusing without mr. richard carson around to head up the de dept.

straining the brain to plan a nutritious lunch with a little variety, dietician elsie fry shoulders responsibility and battles complaints.

socializing at a deca regional meet, mr. harry lunsford and mr. fred cook seem happy at the performance of their students.

various staffs await summer vacations

Summer rolled in and mrs. eleanor sanger turned in her band-aids. she and her family traveled to georgia and abingdon, va. they saw life with father at barter theater. mr. james cook found pleasure in collecting "humorous items." motorcycles and cars captured the interest of mr. richard carson.

he also sponsored the distributive education club. the hobbies of mr. harry lunsford, a new teacher, ranged from photography to music, sports, and travel.

leaning on his king size broom, head custodian paul jordan shoves the mountain of trash left from locker clean-out to the incinerator.

stationed at the monstrous sink, two smiling cafeteria workers pause in the mad rush before lunch to receive recognition for their work.

lee monarchs pass crown to juniors

the nobles of lee reigned for a year and reluctantly, gladly passed the position to the juniors. senior activities were advised by mrs. rebecca harvill and authorized by john stuart, president, barrie miller, vice-president, anne carr, treasurer, and chris gardener, secretary. 2400 dish cloths were ordered to sell. a chilly december bake sale brought warmth to the budget. a special tingle was brought to christmas as seniors planned the traditional christmas party but their efforts proved futile due to snow. as the weather warmed, seniors were guests of the juniors at the prom. caps and gowns were ordered in the spring, and tears soaked them in june.

Singing to their heart's content, we found robbie atkins, sylvia breckenridge, debbie bundy, and elizabeth burnett supporting their assembly choir. devoting many hours of practice and hard work was chuck boone, one outstanding player of the fighting leemen's football team. yelling her head off on the sidelines, ginny buckland worked hard to lead lee high fans in cheers and chants. participating in half-time activities were leslie borrell and polly corten, members of the marching leemen. creating dance routines to the band's music were majorette, wanda cash, and drill team member, sherry armstrong. david addison, helen arehart, eddie bailes, leslie borrell, ginny buckland, and anne carr worked hard in keeping good grades so that they could be members of nhs. eddie bailes and anne carr found time to hold offices in two outstanding groups. eddie was president of the fca and anne served as treasurer of the senior class.

jarvis pieces stained glass together

active in varsity football, don harlow, dicky hamrick, mark harlow, ronnie hevener, and john hodes pounded the field. ronnie and john sang in the chorus and dicky hamrick doubled as sca president. half-time was highlighted by diane iten in the color guard and mike hanger, jim higgs, and david hurst in the marching band.

editing the leeway proved to be a job for lynn jarvis. ann hamilton, leeway cover designer, acted as sca publicity chairman and vice-president of the thespian society.

juniors use candles to unify class

Enthusiastic and energetic about their new role and position in lee high "society", juniors pushed forward into unified action. class elections were promptly held, and each interested person hoped the leaders chosen would be good. eager and excited to earn money for their class, the juniors jumped together to vend fruit cakes, candles, and stationery. more cash was raised at a successful summer car wash while the weekly cleaning of victory stadium was enough to keep everybody busy. each junior did his own thing, whether it be selling, washing, cleaning, or just sitting at the sidelines, but each proved to be one part of an entire school society which created the unity of lee's pattern of variation.

emerging in mishmashed whirls of activity, ranging from the more peaceful world of student librarian donna huff, to the noisier one of jv cheerleaders, lindsey harvill and carolyn hamrick, the junior class spirited onward. stepping high in the color guard was laura henderson contrasted with the alto of jane harman. anthony hamilton blended football and basketball with leading the junior class. football players, david huffer and jose gomez, also divided time with basketball while teammate, mark haston, led the marching band. leadership entered the picture with bob grover serving as vice-president of both the junior class and the fca while sharon harman acted as secretary of the sca. farming attracted kent heizer as he worked with the ffa at valley tech and homemaking attracted janet hendrix as she served as vice-president of the fha.

robert price keeps sca books intact

Sneaking into the sca workroom, we found robert price busily keeping the sca bank account balanced. balancing ability also found its way into the antics of jv cheerleader terry pierce while making pyramids. evenness and poise co-ordinated the movements of leonard robinson and cameron pritt as they raised the dust on the football field, while buoyancy and lightness of foot were incorporated by runners larry pettus and melissa patrick as they strove to keep lee on top.

flashing disagreement from every feature, junior john reid waits a moment before making vocal his views during an english discussion.

drill team adds color, fire to football

filling the football field with radiant colored banners, drill team members roxie stone and kim wagner stepped to the beat of the marching leemen. on the field, mark welcher and steve staton worked together to form tough strategy against the oncoming opponents. meanwhile, philip swann worked hard on layouts and other jobs for the coming leeway '74.

Sweating for the varsity basketball team, rodney williams and paul ziccardy did their duty to the sports scene. paul also concentrated on varsity indoor track and the fca. also in the sports picture, annelisia wilson served on the track team. the girls' basketball team was aided by sandra yancey. as keith wine played in the marching band, pam wimer pranced with the drill team, and annelisia wilson marched with the color guard. vocally contributing to lee, brenda wilfong was a member of the assembly choir. linda wimer slaved for the leeway.

signs guide sophomore feet to class

Confusion followed the herd of sophomores early in september as the halls were stampeded and trampled on by the 840 new feet. shuffling from shop II to a third floor locker, back down to first floor in four fleeting minutes proved to be no easy feat for the new arrivals. with a bent up schedule card in every hand and helpful signs made by the sca for directions, sophomores found lee not to be as forbidding as anticipated. soon, with the election of class and sca reps. completed, and the first harrowing weeks of school behind them, the detached sophomores began to feel a part of the whole student body, one fragment of lee's pattern of variation.

professional doorstep john dickie performs a duty necessary in keeping peace of mind of his fellow sophomores on a windy day.

in the lee band on cold autumn nights for half time entertainment. adding pizazz and good sounds to the assembly choir milton, as well as lee beam and dechantel brooks boomed out the notes of the scales.

try team. other athletic abilities were demonstrated by chubby grover on the wrestling team, neal goodloe on the varsity football squad, and hiner hamrick and paul hilderbrand on the jv football roster. voices echoed from the chorus classes, captivating the interests of cindy humphrey, shawn harrigan, and paul hilderbrand. linda hamrick served as a sophomore class representative.

sophs parade for school spirit at football games

Stepping proud and high was renee osborne, just one of the many girls who exuberantly performed creative half-time shows. after the pretty aspects of a football game, there were some very talented players on the junior varsity roster. such names as marty miller, robert mcneal, and donnie maybush contributed their strength to a victorious effort. sophomore enthusiasm combined forces to let lee high know that they were here to stay.

world peace is dream of six sophs.

In interest in international understanding swept sophomores renee osborne, pam parnell, kathryn peeler, linda phillips, barbara puffenberger, and sherry ralston. the golden voices of renee osborne, edie parkins, and kathryn peeler rang in the assembly choir. sherry ralston, a majorette, and renee osborne, a drill teamer, twirled and danced at football games. michael reed and sharon ramsburg were members of the band. pep club members jane rankin, edie parkins, and sherry ralston cheered the leemen on. mike pilson ran indoor track. sharon ramsburg and theresa rankin helped make up the spanish club. ecology minded stephen race worked on the environment committee and steve phillips enjoyed the outdoors in "nature's own."

sports play a part in sophs. lives

baby leemen scott steffey, dean stuart, and calvin venerable surged for the jv football team. jv basketball also held the interest of dean stuart, and kathy taylor played for the jv girls. scott steffey and ray varner slammed balls for the jv baseball team. ann todd was a member of the girls' varsity basketball team. jay stover played football and baseball. marching and concert band members, scott steffey, kathy taylor, ann todd, ruth sprunt, and colette talley provided background music for countless activities. president of the sophomore class, ann todd, was also a student council representative.

fun and work are in store for students during summer

Warm weather returned and the topic was fun, swimming, tennis, sleeping, picnicking, back packing, horseback riding, or working. many college bound graduates sought jobs to earn pocket money. wedding bells rang for a few. long days of watching the leaves come crossing the first important bridge, seniors finally become graduates and suddenly the fork in the road becomes reality — which way?

multi-colored emotions typify seniors' farewell

Some stopped and glanced over their shoulders to look one last time. many ran yelling down the hill, not caring whether or not they ever saw lee again. good-bye messages were written in four letter words on bathroom walls. a few cried.

remembering the good — remembering the bad. that favorite teacher, that day everything went wrong. "i'll miss it." "good riddance." "who cares?" multiple emotions; a stained glass window of seniors.

the 1974 leeway is printed by delmar printing company, charlotte, north carolina. mr. bob tavenner is our company representative. it is printed with black ink on contemporary matte paper. the cover is roxite c 56521 yellow vellum with pink and blue applied color. the end sheets are mad yellow. the first 48 pages are 70 # text balanced on matte. body copy is 10 point optima bold, headlines are 30 point optima bold, all in lower case. portrait photography is by delmar studios, roanoke virginia. the leeway is a member of the national yearbook association and the southern interscholastic press association.

Dear Susan,

Lunch last year
was really something to remember and Biology and English classes. Hope Gary finally makes up his mind! Best wishes always.

Love,

Kim Lucas

Susan,
I hope we have fun in English
this year and at lunch. Best wishes to a sweet girl.

Love,
Sarah -
Morrison
